Sindhis demand independence

KARACHI. May 20. (Reuter): Separatists in the Pakistani province of Sind demanded independence today as troops were called out to put down rioting between Sindhis and recent immigrants to the province. Police said seven people were wounded in fighting between the two sides in the industrial town of Kotri near Pakistan's biggest city of Karachi, the capital of Sind.

A spokeswoman for the separatists said that 90 leaders of the Sind nationalist cause met at the small village of Sann.

She said the group called for "the emancipation of Sind culturally, economically, and politically."

Mideast peace conference Reagan rules out PLO role

WASHINGTON, May 20. (Kuna): US President Reagan said here today that there is a strong desire in the Middle East to settle once and for all the state of war between Arab countries and Israel

But at the same time he ruled out any chance for the PLO to represent the Palestinian people in any peace negotiations.

The President made the comments in an interview with five European broadcasters on the eve of the Moscow summit.

Reagan defended the recent proposals made by Secretary of State George Shultz to leaders in the Middle East region which involves the convening of an international conference. "But we have made it plain." Reagan emphasised, 'not an international conference to dictate a settlement, but to be helpful if we can to give advice and to make proposals that might help them arrive at a fair and just reace. He added: "If the Soviet Union is to be a member of that conference, they have a step they have to take and that is to resume diplomatic relations with tsrael.

Asked who would represent the Palestinians, Reagan com-mented, .... There is a great feeling that could hardly be Arafat s element, since here you have a group [the PLO] that refuses to recognise the right of Israel to exist as a nation

BEIRUT, May 20, (AP): The Syrian-backed Shi'ite Muslim Amal militia claimed today it had foiled an attempt by Iranianbacked rivals to trade a Western hostage for arms from a Christian militia.

The claim came as Amal and the pro-Iranian Hezbollah hattled for the 15th day for control of the slums of south Beirut and police said rival Palestinian factions clashed in house-to-house fighting in the nearby Bourj Al Barajneh refugee camp.
They said commandos of PLO

Terrorists identified

KUWAITI officials have idenufied two men killed in a car hamh explosion in dawntown

Kuwait City on Wednesday. In a statement the Interior Ministry named the dead men as 22-year-old Nasser Mohammad Al Hassan Ahmed and Walid Abdul Nabi Mohammad Mousa Al Mousa, 23 — both Kuwaitis. Interior Ministry officials said the two men were terrorists who were planning to park the bomb-laden car in front of the Kuwait Airways Corporation building but the explosives apparently went off prematurely.

Killed

The bomh exploded near the Kuwait Airways Corporation huilding on the Hilali Street killing the driver and the passenger of the bomb-laden Mazda car.

The blast took place at 9.05 pm in front of the Othman Building which is adjacent to the KAC huilding.
The Kuwait Airways received a bomb threat by telephone at 8.30 pm on Wednesday.

The explosion damaged several other cars including an Oldsmobile driven by a Syrian, shattered several windows in the building housing the Maharaja Indian restaurant and set a palm tree ablaze.

Two people in a car suffered shock and minor injuries when the bombers' white Mazda saloon hiew up.

The explosion was the third in less than a month in Kuwait, which lies close to the Iraq-Iran warfront and has been a repeated target of acts of terrorism for which the Iranians are held to blame. A Kuwait Airways Boeing 747 was hijacked by gunmen who have been identified as pro-Iranian Shiite extremists, and two of its Kuwaiti passengers were killed in a 16-day ordeal.

AMRITSAR, India, May 20, (Agencies): Security forces fanned out across the north Indian state of Punjah to stem a violent Sikh militant backlash to the siege of the Golden Temple, state police chief K.P.S. Gill said today. Gill, himself a Sikh, told reporters extra paramilitary compan-ies would be sent to areas of the Punjab where Sikh gunmen, angered by police operations at their holiest shrine, have killed more than 135 people in three

"We have mobilised all officers and men. We have put them on extended hours and everyone is taking preventive steps," Gill said.

Expected

Police have said they expect retaliation by extremists still at large in the state. They bave not been disappointed.

At least two dozen were killed in the prosperous farming state today. Six people were killed at a bus stop in Bhatinda district, five at a farmhouse while they slept near Amritsar and five by a

Most recently, Pakistan has accused India of trying to muscle m on Afghanistan, where Soviet troops are pulling out under an international pact, leaving Kabul to face guerrillas who had strong backing from Pakistan during an eight-year war.

"I must say that India did not take any trouble during the last eight years to come forward and say that Afghans should be allowed to solve their problems themselves and that the Soviet Union should withdraw its troops," Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo said in an interview released today.

Pakistan has also drawn attention to large Indian arms purchases, particularly of Soviet nuclear submarines.

other of aiding and abetting antigovernment groups along their respective borders. India has crected a barbed wire fence along part of the border to stop what it says are Pakistani arms supplies to Sikh separatists

Economic population

LONDON, May 20, (Reuter): A United Nations study says the earth can support a projected population of six hillion people at the start of the 21st century if economic development is balanced by environmental conserva-

In its 1988 "state of the world population" report, the UN Population Fund called for urgent action to preserve land, water and air.

World population, now over five billion, will be six billion by the end of the century," the study said. "Nearly all of this growth is in developing countries, by definition those least capable of absorbing it.'

The report said industrialised countries must assist developing nations in solving population problems and acquiring technology that limits environmental damage by industry.

"With care and attention to halanced programmes of conservation and sustainable development on the part of the international community, gover-nments, industry and all levels of society, the earth is capable of supporting the increasing needs of the next century," it said.

According to the study, food production worldwide must increase by three to four per cent annually to feed adequately the present population and 1.1 hillion additional people expected by the end of the century.

It said agricultural growth had to be coupled with land rehabilitation, the use of safe fertilisers and pesticides, better water and irrigation management and a halt to desertification if the goal was to be met.

Each year, the study said tropical forests shrank by 11 million hectares (27 million acres), 26 hillion tonnes of topsoil were lost and six million hectares (15 million acres) of new deserts appeared.

The report said industrialised countries, which contain less than a quarter of the world's population but consume 75 per cent of the energy used, had a tough fight ahead against population.

Judge refuses to free iailed Israeli newsmen

OCCUPIED JERUSALEM, May 20.1UPI): A Tel Aviv judge refused to release four jailed Israeli journalists, saying there is sufficient evidence to believe they damaged state security and were members of a hostile organisation, Army Radio reported.

Judge Arieh Even-Ari refused Thursday to order the release of the editors from the leftist weekly Derech Hanitzotz, published in Hehrew and Arabic, which was closed by the government this

The judge also extended the detention of publisher Assaf Adiv for another 10 days, the radio reported. Adiv was arrested Tuesday while a CBS News television crew interviewed him. Citing security concerns, the government prevented publica-tion of the charges against the editors, and hearings on their cases have been closed

But the judge said that after reading newspaper accounts of the case, he saw no reason to prevent publication of information on the affair. Army Radio reported.

He said some of the editors allegedly confessed in detail to a criminal conspiracy, though some later retracted their statements, Army Radio repor-

"The prosecution has not only these confessions ... hui also additional incriminating evidence," the radio quoted the judge as saying.

Diwaniya is like a barometer

ACROSS Kuwait hundreds of diwaniyas sit each week to debate anything from battles in Beirut to the price of pigeons.

Oil wealth has changed much in the Gulf desert state sandwiched between Saudi Arabia and iraq, but the age-old custom of the diwaniya — a salon where men meet and talk — is as robust as ever.

''It's like a barometer. You can know everything that's going on in the country from a diwaniya, said Sulaiman Al Askari, Kuwait's Assistant Secretary Geoeral of the National Council for Culture.

'In a diwaniya, you can say anything you like, without fear", he added.

Conduil

In a small, close-knit society of 700,000, news is devoured with a passion. Despite newspapers. radio, and television the diwaniva remains a vital conduit.

Kuwaiti men are adamant that backvard satellite disbes, mobile telephones and video will not ousl and evening at their favourite diwaniya for relaxation, gossip and keeping in

"It's like a social club, or a neighbourhood association, said former Finance Minister Ahdul Latif Al Hamad, who now heads the Arab Fund for Economic and Social Development.
"It's nur diwaniya," said educator Hussein Al Youssef, who frequently invites speakers to address topical and often controversial issues.

Unique

Now they are an alternative forum for public debate. Informal, democratic, often boisterous, they may be unique.

In other Gulf states, Arab tribal elders, princes and sheikhs traditionally open their palaces to hear the people's grievances but the gatherings rarely spawn the free-wheeling debate of the Kuwaiti diwaniya.

"Ministers, employees, traders, lawyers and professors gather to discuss sensitive social and political issues," said Askari. They know they will not be taken to task the next day. A diwaniya can be an ornate room where chandeliers bang from a carved wood ceiling, or it can be a simple square on an outdoor terrace with carpets spread on wooden benches.

Cohesion

White-robed men leave sandals by the door and recline among cushions, twirling worrybeads as they sip tea or carmadon-spiced Arabic coffee.

Cutting across class and sectarian lines, the diwaniya preserves social cohesion in a state badly shaken by economic upheaval, terrorism and regional conflict. Kuwaitis sav.

Wives sometimes grumble that their busbands spend too much time in the diwaniyas, which normally close around 10 pm but can go on to midnight.

During the Muslim fasting month of Ramadan, diwaniyas often stretch beyond the predawn meal at one or two am.
But men retort that diwaniyas

Research on radiation

AN official source at Kuwait Institute for Scientific Research (Kisr) said research work on sun radiation in Kuwait provides an informative base on daily and seasonal changes of sun radiaadded that this research is intended to assist scientists at the institute to collect and analyse data on the sun rainbow colours and their characteristics and to comprehend the effect on climatic changes.

Accordingly, the institute established a weather station equipped with the latest censoring and measuring devices. The station is linked to a computer network to record and analyse collected data.

The source added that these measurements are intended to provide a comprehensive picture on sun source characteristics in considered vital to evaluating economical feasibility of sun applications in the design of sun

The sun's energy is measured with an amount of radiation on a horizontal unit area. This amount, he said, approaches 2000 kilowatt-hours on one metre square as an average standard for Kuwaiti areas.

IN 1985 a group of young people from different countries gathered in Honduras where they set out to build a school and repair a lighthouse in a small town of Roatan. Soon after, another group of enthusiasts took off to Peru to instal water pumps in the interior of the country while yet another group worked with oph-thalmic medical teams belping to restore the sight of people in Malaysia.

Since 1984, teams of young explorers have patrolled the steamy jungles of Costa Rica, climbed Mi Kenya, walked on San Rapbael Glacier in Chile, studied the flora of tropical rain forests in Central America, bave gone desert crossing in Australia and diving off the Pacific islands to conduct tiger shark surveys.

They were all 17 to 24 years of age, bad boundless energy and an adventurous spirit. They bad a strong interest in learning about other people, the environment and themselves. They left their mark on the life of different comte parts of the world. These communities, in turn, changed the outlook of young explorers many of whom returned to faraway villages and camps to continue their work.

They were all part of a four year project, Operation Raleigh, now extended due to growing interest.

Expeditions Scientific Exploration Society from Britain is presently seeking to attract young people from Kuwait to join Operation Raleigh, a series of three-month expeditions which combine scientific research, community work and adventure in places as far apart as Alaska and Indon-

The participants, known as venturers, are presented with challenges designed to encourage them to explore the environment and their own mental and physical capabilities. The aim is to imbue them with camaraderie and self-confidence and prepare them for challenging moments later in life.

Operation Raleigh's liaison officer in Kuwait, Dr Kathryn Monk, an ecologist, believes that young people in Kuwait can find expeditions extremely rewarding. "These expeditions teach young people leadership and responsibility, help them build up awareness of the needs of others and also help them discover themselves, all hy tackling very exciting projects," she says. They also promote international rela-

Places are still available, Dr Monk says, for expeditions to Panama, Alaska, the UK, the Rocky Mountains in the US, Guayana, Portugal, the Appalachians in the US, Kenya. Turks and Caicos Islands, Cameroon and Bahamas, all of which will take place in the latter part of this year and in early 1989.

Dr Monk is leaving for Kenya in early June where she will as a staff member conduct the scientific programme for venturers joining two three-month expeditions at two different sites.

Each expedition is divided into three parts each lasting a month, says Dr Monk. Community work includes the construction of bridges, schools, clinics, irrigation ditches and national park development. Scientific projects provide opportunities for research in botany, zoology, marine science, medicine, geology and geography. Dr Monk's project will centre on the ecology of insects in northern Kenya. The venturers are also known to have gone prospecting for mineral deposits in fast-flowing rivers or exploring coral reefs. Snake searches, frog wat-ches and bat and bird studies bave been some of the scientific tasks that venturers have enjoyed. Seeking adventure, the young explorers have gone river rafting, mountaineering, ice climbing. They crisscrossed deserts, oceans and jungles and peered into caves, some of them uncharted and unexplored purely for the challenge. Among the more exciting and arduous undertakings took place in Pakistan last year when venturers retraced Alexander the Great's journey and the ancient silk route using camels.

The venturers live in camps and have to be prepared to carry their own rucksacks packed with gear such as a whistle, a pen knife, a first-aid kit, walking boots, a sleeping bag — the kind of equipment useful when learning how to survive in the wilderness, says Dr Monk. Transport, such as vehicles and canoes, are provided by the organisation.

Danger Dr Monk is at pains to point out that venturers will not be in danger. "The only danger comes when venturers ignore the instructions of their leaders," sbe says.

The cost of joining the expedition is about £3,000 all inclusive. Venturers, as well as staff, are encouraged to raise funds through events organised by themselves or by approaching companies and government departments to help them, thus showing ingenuity, much of which they will need throughout

Dr Monk herself is presently on the look out for sponsorship and would welcome contributions from companies or individuals ready to support the worthwhile project. #### Peaceful settlement of Arab-Israeli conflict urged

THE Kuwaiti daily Al Rail Al Aam yesterday urged the Soviet Union to take the initiative at the upcoming summit with the United States to bring up the subject of the Middle East crisis and press for a peaceful settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

The Soviet Union should raise its voice at the US-Soviet summit in Moscow later this month "to check the open American animosity of the Palestinian people" and support the popular uprising as demonstrating the struggle of the Palestinians, the newspaper The newspaper-said that during the previous three summits between the US President Reagan and the Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, the Middle East crisis received "marginal interest" for less than Afghanistan and other hot points in Africa and Latin

At Ral Al Aam feored that the fourth summit in Moscow might end without acting an the Arab-Israeli conflict, which it said seems to be tiring to both superpowers.

Arabs asked not to put new obstacles in peace talks

AL CARAS newspaper said the American administration has asked the Arabs not to "but new obstacles before the initiation of peace negotiations" based on the proposed American plan to solve the Arab-Israeli conficit.

The paper quoted American sources as saying that the American administration did not mind Arab reservations on the plan and welcomed any ideas or suggestions instead.

In its dispatch from Paris, the paper quoted the sources as saving certain Arab quarters have pledged that they will work for blocking an official rejection of the proposed plan at the extraordinary Arab

The sources added that the Reagan administration held contacts with Arab governments lately through ranking envoys or the normal diplomatic channels and touched on the covening of the summit due in the Algerian capital next June 7.

The sources said the talks between US Assistant Secretary of State John Whitehead and King Hasson !! of Morocco in Rabot and with ranking Tunisian and Algerian officials were almed at briefing those leaders an what Washington expects from the summit regarding the Arab-Israeli confilct.

The sources added that parts of the talks between American Ambassador to the United Nations Vernon Walters and each of King Husseln of Jordan and Egyptian President Hosni Muborok also dealtwith the upcoming Arab summit and the United States' stance

Al Qabas said direct contacts were also held between Washington and several Arab states including Damascus regarding the issue and added that "certain Palestinians' were also briefed through a leading Arab country on the American stance.

The paper quoted the sources as saying the Reagan administration expressed hope during the tolks that the Arabs would not officially reject the American peace plan "almed at solving the Arab-Israeli conflict."

THE manager of a cooperative society said sales during Ramadan increased 60 per cent. Sales increased from a daily KD21,000 to an average daily of KD33,000 during Ramadan.

Many persons admitted eating more confectioneries during Ramadan. A study revealed that the average yearly consumption of sugar per individual in Kuwait rose from 30 kilos in 1972 to 35 kilos in 1983. Conversely. individual annual consumption of fruits decreased from 95 kilos in 1972 to 84 kilos in 1983. The study indicated that many new restaurants which opened during 2:35 the last four years have changed to selling confectioneries.

India charting new strategy for women

By Moses Manoharan

NEW DELHI, (Reuter): India is charing an ambitious course designed to help its 370 million women to catch up with men in social and economic status by the end of this century.

A governemnt spokeswoman said the plan aims to end discrimination against women in jobs, free them from religious laws and enforce legislation protecting them against crimes such as those connected with

"It is the most extensive programme we have ever had for women," the spokeswoman said, adding: "It attempts to coordinate efforts of several ministries towards helping women achieve progress."

Dowries are against the law, hut tradition still demands a hride bring gifts or cash for her new family. If demands for higger dowries are not met, brides are sometimes killed by their husbands or in-laws.

Thrust

"It (the plan) seeks a new thrust and responsiveness to development programmes and recommends certain special measures for women to ensure that they catch up with the main-stream by 2000 AD," said Women's Affairs Minister Margaret Alva.

The plan was debated oo May 17 hy a committee headed by Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

Rajiv has given women's rights prominence since he took office in 1984, but the new plan does not have universal backing. Veena Mazumdar, head of the Centre for Women's Develop-ment and Studies in New Delhi.

said she opposed a separate plan 'We should have women's programmes incorporated in the development plans of different ministries," she said.

The plan, due to come into force later in 1988, also includes a potentially controversial measure making all laws equally controversial applicable to Hindus, Muslims and Christians by the year 2000, crasing current exceptions on religious grounds.

The move is bound to anger hardliners among India's 100 million Muslims, the country's largest minority.

Relations between Muslims and the Hindus who make up 85 per cent of the population of 750 million have always been tense, but were further strained in 1986 when the supreme court overruled an Islamic law denying alimony payments to a divorced Muslim woman.

Rajiv brought the dispute to an end by compromise legisla-tion which makes a divorced Muslim woman's family responsible for her welfare.

Mazumdar acknowledged the potential for trouble. "But can we plan without taking risks?" she asked.

The main thrust of the plan is to help some 170 million women who live in poverty.

India has made some progress in improving the lot of women, with life expectancy rising from 44.7 years in 1960-71 to 52.9 years in 1971-81.

But there is still a long way to

One of the latest threats to women is the increasing use of pre-natal sex tests, which have led to abortions of female foetuses. Apart from a traditional desire for male children, female bahies grow up to require expensive dowries.

The 1981 census found 75 per cent of Indian women illiterate. with enrolment of girls in higher education almost static between 1975 and 1985.

Work

Women in rural areas, where most Indians live, do an average of 12 hours of agricultural work a day as well as domestie work, the government says.

To reverse these trends, the plan recommends a review of property laws to ensure women's It also says women should comprise 30 per cent of candidates in every list sent to prospective employers by governmentrun employment exchanges. --

It advocates the setting up of special groups to enforce legislation on women's issues, including a ban on pre-natal sex tests and the introduction of sex and family planning education in schools and colleges.

The plan urges political parties to make sure 30 per cent of their election candidates are women. It calls for an equal ratio of seats be reserved for them in parliament until the year 2000.

"Unless bold interventions are made to correct imbalances, we would be entering the 21st century with our women left far behind." Alva said.

Racial tension simmers on China's Silk Road

By Andrew Roche

KASHGAR. West China, (Reuter): Ancient racial and religious hatreds still simmer in this remote oasis city of China's fabled Silk Road, ruled from Peking but geographically and cultural closer to Turkey.

Han Chinese hold most of the leading Communist Party posts in the region despite being outnumbered by Muslim Central Asians, some blue-eyed and auburn-haired, whose resentment of the settlers from the east has contributed to Kashgar's bloody history.

Local government officials confirmed for the first time this month a that an organised uprising against Chinese rule took place as late as the early 1980s.

Rebellion

Muslim peasants in Payzawat, 100 km (60 miles) east of Kashgar, raided a military armoury and attacked Hun Chinese with the stolen weapons. Units of the People's Liberation Army crushed the rebellion, with many deaths, local people from the Muslim Uygur ethnic group said.

Kashgar's vice-mayor Mohamed Emin, a Uygur but a non-Muslim Communist Party nember, said a group "bent on destroying ethnic unity" had been responsible but that he knew no further details.

Payzawat — called Jiashi county by Peking — is closed to foreigners although overseas tour groups now regularly visit

Local sources said the rebellion followed riots in Kasbgar in 1981 which exploded when a Chinese shopkeeper shot dead a Uygur peasant who had parked a donkey-cart load of manure outside his premises.

Grievances

Government and party officials insist that etbnic divisions and religious persecution are a thing of the past, hut many Uygurs consider the Han Chio-ese colonial invaders in the region of deserts and mountains three times the size of France named Xinjiang or 'new domin-ion' hy the China's Manehu

We want our own independent country, as the Tibetans do. But it is impossible now because too many Chinese have come already. There is no hope," said one well-educated Uygur.

Han Chinese, many ordered to Xinjiang in the 1960s under Mao Tsetung's now discredited policy of turning wilderness over to agriculture, make up 40 per cent of Xinjiang's population of 14 million, according to official

The Uygurs, whose language is close to Turkish, and other Muslim ethnic groups say that among their grievances are cultural discrimination, the use of Xinjiang labour camps as a dumping ground for convicts from east China, and past nuclear bomb tests in the region. Passions are roused, too, against the large concentrations of Chinese troops defending Xinjiang's sensitive — and still disputed - borders with the Soviet Union, Afghanistan, Pakistan and India.

The Kashgar area is a divided community, with ao Han Chiaese concentrated in the neighbouring county of Sule, where local people say a major military base is located. Sule, like most of Xinjiang, is closed to foreigners.

Despite the tensions, recent organised political resistance to Chinese rule has been limited to protest marches by Uygur students in 1986 and the sending of occasional anonymous leaflets calling for an independent Xinjiang to Beijing-based foreign journalists.

Local officials are eager to point out that Beijing's policy is now one of positive discrimination towards the Uygurs, who are exempted from China's strict one child per family policy and are admitted to attend university with school grades lower than the national standard.

SAO PAULO, (Reuter): About 40 children die every bour in. Brazil, a nation where the young bear much of the hrunt of the economie crisis, doctors and economists say.

In an effort to cut public spending and service its massive $121 billion external debt. Brazil is investing less in health care today than it did in the 1970s. At a recent Sao Paulo conference on the impact of the economic crisis on child welfare, doc-tors, sociologists and economists issued a ringing warning to the government. Unless child bealth care is quickly improved, Brazil will pay a very beavy price

Navantino Alves Filho, a con-sultant with the Brazilian Pediatric Society, told the con-ference that about 40 children die every bour in Brazil and about two million were expected to the over the next five years, mainly from malnutrition.

Sanitation

John Donohue, director of the United Nations Children's Fund (Unicef), told Reuters: "Half of Brazil's 320,000 children up to the age of five who die each year could be saved if basic sanitation and education programmes were implemented."

Child deaths are usually caused by diarrhoea, infectious disease and malnutrition. In Brazil's northeast, acute malnutrition is producing a gen-and the biggest by far in the southern bemisphere. Official statistics show that infant mortality rates vary considerably from year to year, apparently reflecting the ups and downs in the economy.

The rate decreased steadily during the 1970s, but in 1984, a year of serious recession; the rate jumped to 68.2 deaths per 1,000 births compared to 62.7 in 1982.

In 1986, government-imposed price controls led to a rise in real income and brought the mortality rate down to 53 deaths per 1,000 births, the lowest ever. But with controls lifted and inflation skyrocketing at 20 per cent a mouth, deaths will result. cent a month, experts say more Given past experience it is elear that the social cost of this economic crisis in terms of infant mortality will mirror those of the 1984 recession," Malaquias Batista Filho, a nutrition lecturer from Recife University, told Reuters. Batista and other experts accused the government of concentrating on balance of payment problems and of ignoring the needy, particularly in the countryside. They mocked President Jose Sarney's slogan which boasts "Everything for social welfare" and argued that the few 1987 statisties available showed government neglect of the poor. Welfare expenditure fell about 13 per cent in 1987 compared with 1986, while money going specifically to medical care dropped 10 per cent, according to official figures In public bospitals across the country, basic care is precarious.

Many experts said that the money which was available was not used well. A confidential World Bank report leaked this April in the Braziliao press concluded that resources had not been effectively targetted to the underprivileged majority.

"In fact, a large share of social expenditure actually subsidises higher-income groups," the report said.

One preculiarity of Brazil is the high number of Caesarean births, a world record of 31 out of. 100. This costs the government money, since according to the report 72 per cent of the operations - many for middle and upper class women --- are subsidised by the government.

Unnecessary Caesarean births cncouraged doctors who wish to double their profits and save time.

According to Roberto Macedo, n leading Brazilian economist and a contributor to the World Bank report, Brazil bas traditionally sponsored programmes for urban workers. while widely ignoring the rural and underemployed classes.

"The programmes miss their target," he said.

'I hate the travelling, the process of being on the road and having to be protected. You have to stay with it, when all you want to do is go home and forget about it - forget about what you do for a living."

He admits that part of it stems from being without Rid-geley, his partner in Wham! for three years before Michael disbanded the duo in 1985. Touring and performing on his own is tough, he says. BOSTON: For space station chief Andrew J. Stofan, the program he heads is more than NASA's "next logical step" in space. It represents a new more integrated way of life for that turf-conscious agency. It also represents a new level of cooperation with — and dependence on — a set of foreign partners. Thus the space station programme is making organisational and diplomatic advances while promising to provide a permanent outpost in orbit. "This is new and dif-ferent from anything we've ever done before," says Mr. Stofan.

"It is the first programme
NASA has ever had that cuts across the entire agency," he says. "Yes, it touches every single other group at NASA. ... NASA has been in eamps before." He adds, "I think NASA will be a much better, stronger organisation working stronger organisation working as a team rather than as eparate entities.

NASA has formed important foreign partnerships before as in the case of the European-supplied Spacelab launched from the shuttle, or the German-made rocket engine for the agency's Galileo probe to Jupiter. But this is the first time that foreign partners play a crucial role in the development of what NASA considers a keystone programme.

Stofan calls it an opportunity for NASA and its partners—Canada, the European Space Agency (ESA), and Japan — to learn 'how to do a massive big thing really together." He believes "this will be the precursor for the future cooperation in space."

Stofan and other space sta-tion boosters hope that those who must support the programme will look beyond the hardware and recognize these other facets. Delays and redesigns forced by the kind of chronic underfunding that afflicted the shuttle's development could sour the new relationships. NASA had already redesigned the station concept several times before it let contracts for the hardware last November. Now, by order of Congress, it must rethink even that scaled-back concept. back concept.

In December's deficit-paring budget resolution. Congress gave the station program $425 million for fiscal 1988. That's well below the $767 million program managers expected early last fall. Only $200 million is available before func.

is available before June. Congress directed NASA to replan the programme to fit similarly low budgets over the next several years. This could involve a further redesign of the station, a slowed construction schedule, or both. Congress will release the additional $225 million if it approves the new

If there is any redesign, it will he a modification of what NASA calls the "baseline configuration." As shown in the illustration, it provides living quarters for eight astronauts plus laboratories supplied by the United States, ESA, and Japan. These attach at the cen-tre of a 110-metre-long (120 yards) boom which also carries solar rays to supply 75 kil-owatts of electric power. The boom also has two attachment points for mounting a variety of scientific instruments. A mobile manipulator — a kind of sophisticated robot arm - will move along the hoom to service equipment. It will even help put the station itself together.

NASA calls this its Block I station. This is the model it has authority to build and for which it has let contracts. Two polar-orbiting platforms with instruments for studying Earth's air, sea, and land are part of the Block I program.

NASA hopes, eventually, to enhance the station with more electric power and extra trusses to hold a variety of instruments and equipment. This Block II improvement would restore features dropped from an earlier design to cut costs.

Block II may never be huilt. A committee of the National Research Council (NRC) the operating arm of the National Academies of Science and Engineering - has reviNasa forms important foreign partnerships

A permanent outpost in orbit

ewed NASA's station plans and cost estimates. Its September report endorsed the Block I design as one that could carry out needed basic research, But it said Block II plans should be shelved until the US has a clearer concept of what it wants to do in space.

It explained: "If the United States is going to remain a leader among spacefaring nations, the station must evolve to support this role. Lack of consensus on our long-term objectives in space limits the extent to which this evolution can be foreseen, thus it is too early to commit to Block 11," On the Block I station, astronauts can perform a variety of experiments on the behaviour of materials under weightless conditions, They can, for example, refine techniques for growing very pure semiconductor crystals for electronic uses.

Meanwhile, space biologists can study the effects of extended periods of weightless living on astronauts. The Soviets have already gained considerable experience with this.

It is hard to make a direct comparison between the station NASA plans and the Soviet Mir, now manned and orhiting overhead. Mir is designed around a central living and work module to which other modules can be attached. The Kvant astron-omical observatory attached to Mir last spring is the first of several of these. While NASA's station has no such provision, additional laboratories might be added in Block II.

NASA also plans to service satellites and free-flying platforms from the station. An orbital manoeuvering vehicle — a kind of space tug — will help in this servicing. The sta-tion could become the huh of a kind of orhiting industrial park. The Soviets have announced no such plans for

Mir. NASA has a rival for the affections of Congress and the administration, however, in the unmanned, astronaut-serviced Industrial Space Facility (ISF) designed by Space Industries

Partnership in Houston. The facility will be a free-fly-ing, pressurized structure laun-ched by the shuttle. It would lease space to companies, universities, or government agencies whose experiments would be installed and retrieved by astronauts.

NASA has praised ISF as a good facility to accompany the space station — mainly as a place to carry out manufacturity. ing of drugs and materials. But it has belittled ISF's capacity for research, saying users want astronauts constantly on hand to tend their equipment.

The White House disagrees and has ordered NASA to launch and service the ISF and lease some of its space. Con-gress earmarked $25 million for this purpose in NASA's fiscal 1988 hudget. This would ensure enough demand for Space Industries to proceed with ISF, even though it has not yet attracted much commercial business. At this writing. NASA is resisting the directive and the issue remains unsettled.

Congress is also concerned that NASA may neglect unmanned space programs in favor of the space station, just as it short-changed other programs to build the shuttle.

Commitment

The hudget report said NASA has not lived up to a commitment to devote at least 20 per cent of its resources to space science and applications.
NASA Adminstrator James
Fletcher insists that the agency will not neglect this area. But there is widespread concern among US space scientists that they face a lean future.

NASA's station design has also drawn criticism because it doesn't provide large centrifuge facilities that simulate varying gravities. Variable-gravity research could be important in deciding whether to supply some level of gravity to astronauts travelling to Stofan, however, says the majority of the expert advisory committee doesn't want a zero gravity station.

They understand one G (Earth surface gravity) and they don't understand any thing else. They said we've got to understand the other end of the spectrum — the zero gravily end," he says. If a variable-G facility is needed later, he adds. it can be a free-flying satellite that orhits near the station. It is hard to know exactly when NASA's station will be operational, given the uncertainty of future budgets. NASA is aiming for the mid-1990s.

Overall cost of the program is also "iffy." In 1984, when President Reagan ordered NASA to build a station within a decade, NASA put the cost at $g billion. It revised that estimate to $14.5 billion (in 1984 dollars) a year ago. That ooes not include the ground facilities, launch services, or NASA personnel salaries. which hoost the total to $21 billion (1984 dollars). The NRC committee telt uneasy nhout these cost estimates. It came up with a projected total cost range of $21 billion to $25 hillion in 1984 dollars or $25 hillion to 29.9 billion in 1988 dollars. Both NASA and the NRC committee stress that all such cost estimates are preliminary Only as contractors begin cutting metal will they get the experience to give tighter estimates. Meanwhile, the committee repeats that, as was learned from the shuttles experience, up-and-down fun-ding or stretched-out funding will raise overall costs.

The NRC report warns: The space station cannot be considered a "one administration" programme, nor can it be developed "on the cheap." It calls for "adequate and predictable funding."

It urges that the programme be given three-year hudgets. instead of annual authorisations, to help ensure such find-ing stability. Hard-pressed to hold down spending, neither Congress nor the administra-tion has followed that advice.

For his part, Stofan observes stoically: "The space station has been a tough thing to get sold. Each day we get a little

High-technology in Formula One racing

THE design process involved in building a Grand Prix car today is perhaps as challenging andcompetitive as the wheel to wheel battles out on the circuit. Over the past couple of decades design and development techniques have become steadily more complex and esoteric as engineers continue searching for the decisive, yet marginal. performance edge which makes the difference between a winning car and an uncompetitive

Inevitably, in this high-tech age, the use of computer technology has played an increasingly crucial role in streamlining production techniques and reducing the time it takes to produce essential components. At the other end of the scale, once the cars are competing out on the circuit, their progress and competitiveness is monitored and recorded by a highly sophisticated computerised timing system.

Computer drawing

Computer aided design and manufacturing systems (Cad/ Cam) are now replacing the drawing boards in Formula 1 design offices. Instead of painstakingly producing a whole sequence of lahour-intensive drawings, the design engineers can now sit at computer drawing boards in Formula One design offices. Instead of painstakingly producing a whole sequence of labour-intensive drawings, the design engineers can now sit at computer screens, entering every detail of the proposed car's concept and dimensions.

Over the past decades design and development techniques have become steadily more complex as engineers continue to search for the decisive edge which makes a difference.

Once all the details are fed into the Cad/Cam system, the design department will not only have the facility to examine a three-dimensional image of the planned car on the screen, they will also be able to view that image from every conceivable angle to assess its potential.

But, as Ferrari chief designer formei Marlhoro McLaren team member John Barnard emphasises, a Cad Cam system is a tool intended to ease the design task. It is not computerised miracle worker.

"The best way of describing the advantage of a Cad/Cam system within the business of racing car design is that it speeds up the overall design process. "explains Barnard. "It enables you to arrive at a finished component theoretically quicker than you might using conventional methods. For example, when making the moulds used in the manufacture of body panels, it is possihie to link the Cad/Cam system to a machine which actually cuts out the material into the required shapes.

However, don't he fooled into thinking that a Cad/Cam system comes up with magic answers. It certainly does not! It reduces what I would describe as the 'in-between stage.' cutting down the time it takes to translate a design from so many angles that there is always the possibility that you may be tempted into making things a little more complex than they would otherwise be."

Data acquisition is another important area of Formula 1 technology that has reached new peaks of sophistication in recent years. Twenty years ago, one of Goodyear's engineers sat astrice the engine cover of Dan Gurney's Eagle-Weslake, facing backwards, to study the hehaviour of the rear tyre profiles as Gurney drove him at speed round Goodwood! The tyre company needed to find out certain facts about their tyre's performance at speed and, at the time, this was the most practical means of discovering what they wanted to

By the early 1970s, however, this sort of development had taken a more complex turn. Marlboro McLaren chief designer Gordon Murray recalls Goodycar discussing with him the possibilities of producing a computerised 'model" of a planned new racing tyre, utilising input from a very crude cassette data recording system briefly fitted to one of the contemporary Brabham

In 1978 former Goodyear design consultant Karl Kempf joined the Tyrrell team and began applying computer age technology to the business of data gathering during the course of the Grand Prix season. With facilities in the pits for analysing the tapes removed from the car's onboard recording systems, Kempf was able to build up a picture of how the suspension was performing at any specific time, plus the way in which the driver was using the throttle and hrakes. The knowledge gleaned from this equipment helped the team in making optimum changes to the car's chassis sel-up at future races in addition to developing new suspension geometry.

Telemetry systems

By the early 1980s data gathering began to be enhanced with the use of telemetry systems, a radio signal to a record-ing base enabling data to be gathered while the cars were actually running on the circuit. Brahham, with BMW, and Renault were amongst the first teams to use such systems.

By the end of the 1987 season, both Ferrari and Marlboro McLaren had developed systems of such sophistication that cockpit readings could be viewed and monitored from the trackside, engineers on the pit wall acting as a "double check" for the driver, reminding him and advising him to keep an eye on such critical performance parameters as fuel consumption and turbo hoost pressure.

In addition to this complex monitoring equipment, the thermo-dynamic complexity of turhocharged Grand Prix engines have brought about an explosion in the development computer-controlled "engine management sys-

Wind tunnel data

More recently, Ferrari's superb new wind tunnel complex has produced yet another computerised twist to the business of setting up the chassis of the team's Grand Prix cars. The computer-monitoring system is now so sophisticated that wind tunnel data is relied upon to produce the individual chassis set-ups for various circuits on the Championship calendar. Once the computer has produced its analysis of the results, the chassis are adjusted accordingly and scarcely touched all weekend.

Occasionally one of the drivers may want to try his own little experiment." admits Ferrari's Harvey Postlethwaite. "Sometimes we let them fiddle around for a few minutes — even though we've probably run their variation through the computer and know that it doesn't work so well. It usually doesn't take long for the driver to revert to the original set up.

A safe Chernobyl

By Roger Highfield

THE Chernobyl nuclear reactor design is alive and well, despite reports of its demise. The graphite-moderated, water-cooled, channel-tube reactor design (RBMK) was thought to have been abandoned by the Soviet Union in the wake of the catastrophe.

But it has now emerged that Soviet scientists have developed a new type of RBMK, called the Advanced Channel-type Reactor (ACR), which has eight important design improvements. The Ministry for Nuclear Power

has included the ACR in a nuclear plants which was ordered after the Chernobyl disaster. Two years ago today, Chernohyl workers prepared for an ill-fated experiment. It ended with a nuclear cloud over Europe.

Essential safety systems were switched off to perform the experiment at low power, conditions at which the RBMK was vulnerable to its "positive void coefficient" - physicists' jargon for the fact that if water

The coefficient led to an uncontrollable power surge. It wrecked number four reactor. The heart of the new ACR reactor has been redesigned so that it has a "negative void coefficient." Any surge of temperature would tend to shut down the chain reaction. The ACR has better control and instrumentation so that operators are unable to ignore safety procedures. And it has more features to keep cooling

In the event of a meltdown, when molten fuel burns its way below the reactor, the ACR has a water-cooled barrier to prevent the molten core from breaching

Genetic engineering takes root

FRANKFURT/Main (INP): The initial phase of industrial application of genetic engineering has begun in the Federal Republic of Germany. The products of scientific laboratory work are finding their way into crop and lives-tock production. Already, there are visions of

"super vegetable" which provides its own dung and is immune to insects and other forms of pest. In the livestock sector, scientists are attempting to produce new hreeds of creature with economically attractive or technically interesting and profit-hringing qualities. They are working, too, on making plants which can be exported and grown in deserts or cold zones. The Deutscher Bundestag

the Bonn parliament - has debated the opportunities and risks entailed in genetic engineering and ruled that its application "must not lead to further intensification of agriculture." Commission Chairman Wolf-Michael Catenhausen says that quality enhancement is wanted, higher crop output and more surluses not.

Before long, genetically altered crops will appear on the market. Germany's biggest seed producers, Kleinwanzlebener Saatzucht of Ham-hurg, has succeeded in cultivating virus-free seed potatoes, thus at the same time accelerating the succession of generations, naturally limited to one year. Work is now being carried out on a type of sugarbeet with resistance to specific diseases; part of a virus is implanted in the chromosomes, causing the formation of anti-bodies resistant to the viruses causing dis-

Genetic engineering is making more rapid advances in the breeding of livestock. A new pig is being hred in Munich, for example, which is said to be immune to influenza. In general, over-hreeding has reduced the resistance, fertility and life expectancy of livestock. Thoroughhred cows and pigs confined to fully mechanised stalls are more susceptible to stress, skeletal damage, bone fractures and infection. # Breaking communal barriers on the screen

THE Indian screen knows no bars of caste, community, creed or religion. All come here and adopt an integrated style, without the problems of individual indentity which often leads to disintegration. Of course, the pursuit of success, fame and wealth by itself becomes a creed which supercedes all other "faiths". It grows to be a sucreligion by itself.

Yet as a matter of record as well as a study of ethnic qualities we must try to recal! and find, who belonged to which community, or rather which community brought up what type of artistes. The search in fact hecomes more difficult as many known performers of their time worked under assumed screen names. By and large, the Muslim actresses provided a sizeable contribution. And the discerning eye could possibly spot them out, though they merged so intimately with the overall image of an Indian heroine or more specifically a Hindu character. If the film was one with a Muslim back-ground, the Hindu actresses also achieved a remarkahle identification. In the early years of the Indian silent film one really did not know who was who, as the names were strange. Yet, surprisingly, in those forgotten years hetween 1913 and 1931 we come across many actresses who boldly appeared under their own real Muslim names. It was only in later periods, with the fight for independence and the unfortunate communal conflicts, that the need to suppress the names became more acute. Some of the top most names emerging in the forties reached the zenith under disguised names. And now again. we have turned a full circle and nobody minds using the real

Fatima Begum was surely the most courageous woman. born to cinema, in the midst of the silent era. She emerged as an actress in films differing as widely as "Prithvi Vallabh" and "Raja Harishchandra", and had the foresight to stand out as a producer and director. She set p ine viciona i ralima ilim company, the first womanoriented production concern and she madequite a number of films. What's more she introduced her three young daughters Sultana, Zubeida and Shehzadi to films and turned them into heroines. All the three acted together in her "Kanak Tara" made in 1929. Fatima must have had a few hassles with the men of her time. The hrittle brown pages of old newspapers carry accounts of her court-room

Sultana dominated the screen with her charm and coise, giving a tough time to the top Anglo-Indian heart-throh Sulochana (Ruhy Mayers), But the one who lasted tonger was Zuheida. She finally got the honour of hecoming the heroine of India's first talkie "Alam Ara" (1931). There were also those like Yakhal and Khatoon in Bombay and Sharifa who was a star atttraction of the famed Madan. Theatres of Calcutta.

Language was never a problem with the Muslim actresses. In fact, it was a definite asset for them, since they could speak very fluently the Persianised Urdu and stageoriented dialogue in their own mother tongue. The later famous actresses in the boom period of the Hindi talkies like Nargis. Madhubala, Meena Kumari or Suraiya all scored because of their smooth command over the language.

Two actresses who started with silent films and merged smoothly in the talkie to dominate a decade and a half were Mehiah (Mrs Sohrah Modi) and Sardar Akhtar (later Mrs Mehbooh Khan). There was also the green-eyed Zehunissa who drifted to character acting and even bit roles till recent years.

Sardar Akhtar: she was married to Mehboob Khan

The silent era even had its own Mumtaz, Nargis and Noorjehan but they soon faded. And no doubt the top one, though with a short tenure was Gohar Mamajivala or the golden Gohar, heroine of Ranjit Studios and partner of the redouhtable Sardar Chandulal. Shah. She featured exclusively in the Ranjit silent and talkie films. And then, there was the gentle Jillohai (real name Zulekha Ibrahim) who continued for many years in Hindi

In the bloom of the talkies, the stage actresses who could also sing took to the all talkingsinging-dancing pictures, like the provercial duck to the water. The top most among them was Jahan Ara Kajjan, the undisputed queen of Madan Theatres. Paired with Master Nissar, she yielded some of the biggest hits of the initial talkie years, like "Shirin Farhad". "Laila Majnu" "Indra Sahha" and "Bil-wamangal". There were also others like Zohrabai, Mukhtar Begum, Anwari, Alhtari Muradabadi, Akhtari Faizahadi, (later to become the har Karnatki, Amirbai Kar-natki etc. Topping above them all was Jaddanbai. She came as an actress singer, saw the male dominated scene and then conquered more realms than Fatima Begum hy also becoming a producer, director, writer, music director. Above all she brought her little daughter Bahy Rani as a child star and thereby gifted to the industry one of its most versatile talents, namely Nargis (later Mrs Sunil Dutt). Along with Jaddanhai, there were Ameena, Bibbo, Shirin Banu, Husn Banu, Azurie and many others. Then came Naseem Banu through Sohrah Modi's films. And her daughter Saira's later successful career is quite well known to cinegoers of today. Noorjehan who had begun as a juvenile star, grew to be a much-loved singer star in memorable films like "Jugnu" and "Anmol Ghadi". Her contemporary Khurshid, who did films like "Tansen" with Saigal was also popular, hefore migrating to Pakistan. We also recall Neena of "Ek Raat" and Swarnalata of "Rattan".

Shamim who had been active for many years became a heroine in some films, like Kishore Sahu's "Sindoor" before leaving the country. Rehana became a rage in P.L. Santoshi's musical cum comedy films with a touch of melodrama like "Shehnai". Mumtaz Shanti had acted in some of the higgest hits of the 40's, like "Kismet" with Asbok Kumar and "Basaot" with Ulhas. Io the latter film, another little Muslim girl Mumtaz made her dehut and went on to rise to great heights of fame as Madhubala.

And still earlier Baby Meena took a start of a career, which was to take her to the pinnacle as "tragedy queen" Meena Kumari. Baby Naaz (real name Salma Sultan) remaioed a popular child star, though she could not retain her place after growing up.

Then there were also those tall stately womeo who made an impact. Munawar Sultana acted io quite a few films, including Muslim socials and some with Dilip Kumar. Veena was the oatural choice for historicals or haughty characters in socials. Nigar Sultana with her beautiful hazel eyes and quaint charm made a mark. (Her daughter Heena Kausar also came into films later, but could not shape a career). Begum Para arriving in mid 40's was one of the first to adopt a liberal style in dressing and exposing. She got dubbed for posterity as an "oomph-girl". In contrast to these well-built women was the petite Nimmi, discovered by Raj Kapoor. She carved her own cosy corner in sentimental roles.

In the younger lot can also be included the lovely Ameeta (Qamar Sultana), who was a popular beroine. Her daughter Sabia has just recently started her career. Among the many names, those who made an impact were Shakila and her sister Noor, Chand Usmani, Shyama, Jabeen Jalil, Meena Shorey, the Lara Lappa girl who receotly died in Pakistan. Minu Mumtaz (sister of Mehmood), Kumkum and the popular screen mother Pratima Devi (Khair-ul-Nisa) and of course the huhhly Tahassum who forgot to grow up. Holding total sway over the hearts and minds of cinegoers for more than a decade were the top four. Nargis started as a heroine in Mehbooh's "Taqdeer" and reached the ultimate of her career in the same maker's "Mother India". She has taken her place among the all time greats. Madhubala's charm was infectious and she grew to be a hig star. Her role in "Mughal-e-Azam" has immor-talised her. Meena Kumari moved hearts and strained tear ducts, in film after film, till the magnum opus "Pakeezah" which became a hit after her sad death. Suraiya has remained the most well-preserved of all, a survivor hut a retired one.

Before the 70's and 80's descended on us, which are too well known and all the Muslim actresses of which need not be remembered, there were some mid-generation actresses. They appeared io quite a few films but not very successfully. Among them were Sayeeda Khan, Nazima, Zeh Rahman, Azra, Chitra and her sister Sabira, Zaheeda, Zahirra, Farida Jalal, the character actresses Munitaz Begum and Anjana Mumtaz. One who rose from the ranks, stole the real hig limelight and retired at the pinnacle of glory was Murntaz. Ironically, her sister Malka (like Madhubala's sister) could got achieve half the success.

Some of the most talented actresses who adomed and aided off-beat as well as art films emerged from the Muslim community. First it was Waheeda Rebman, then Rehaoa Sultan and then Shabana Azmi, followed to a lesser degree by Zarina Wahah. Waheeda's quiet, sensitive and rich talents were explored in many films of Guru Dutt and other directors of a better grade. Rehana Sultan flashed like a gem in a few films but unfortunately could never vibe well with the industry and its style of functioning. Shabana has had the best of both worlds and continues as one of the few genuinely gifted aetresses

Among the popular int also there were many like Reena Roy, Zeenat Aman, Parveen Babi and the rest. While the twn last-named brought a new mod culture to films with their personalities and accent in speaking dialogue, Reena Roy was the traditional heroine and was the present age of Mandakini, Farha (with her sister Tabboo), Sonam, Salma Agha, Saaniya, Huma Khan and others. Many of them have yet to prove their worth or get the right roles to

Time alone will tell whether the Muslim community will again contribute someone to match the likes of Nargis, Meena Kumari or Madhubala, to merge with the image and concept of the Indian screen heroine so well as to erase the differences between commuoities. Such a one would again

ANXIETY OF ARRHYTHMIA

QUESTION: My heart has an irregular beat. It is driving me crazy. What should I ANSWER: The first thing to do if you think you have an irregular heartbeat, or arrhythmia, and haven't seen a doctor, is see a doctor. Now, you're already under a physician's care, so you have taken that important fist step.

Learning you have an irregular heartbeat is stressful. It is normal to feel anxious if a physician has told you that you have a health problem and that you can't do too much about it. Some patients show anxiety by keeping constant track of their heartbeat or may fear going to sleep in case their heart stops. Others try to deny anything is wrong and want to stop all testing. Anxiety in some can be so severe that patients panie and their heart conditions are made worse.

Many patients become depress in this kind of situation, which is to be expected to a certain extent when a previously healthy person learns he or she has a chronic illness. Symptoms of depression may include irritability, loss of appetite, lack of energy and difficulty in getting to sleep. Usually, depression diminishes with time as the patient adapts.

Both anxiety and depression can be helped with therapy and, in some cases. medication. In severe cases a psychiatrist or psychologist may be needed to help you learn to cope with the state of your health. It is not a sign of weakness or instability to sec a psychiatrist. One of their functions is to help the mentally well stay that way, during a time of stress. A mental health professional also can help you learn relaxation techniques and other behaviour modifications such as self-hypnosis that may reduce your levels of anxiety.

Medications help many people cope with anxiety and depression, but these must be chosen carefully to ensure they do not interfere with the drugs being used to treat the Diagnosing your arrhythmia condition and treating it usually will mean a series of tests that may or may not show anything and perhaps trials with various medications, some of which may belp and some of which won't. If medication fails, a pacemaker may be considered. A lot of fine tuning is necessary to achieve just the right balance of incdication to reduce the anxiety-provoking beating of the hart to a point you can accept. You need to understand as much about your condition as possible and about the potential frustrations of your treatment regimen. No one said you had to like it, but knowing what is happening will help you cope with it. ACROSS MY DESK: While we all have read about the bone weakening disease "osteoporosis" as it affects women, little attention has been given to its possible effects on our male population. It may, in fact, be "a neglected male disease" according to Dr Richard Rivlio, professor of medicine and chief of nutrition services at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Hospital and New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Centre. The disease affects men at a later age, perhaps 10 years after women fall prey to the affliction, and men are less likely to pay heed to their diet and the nutritioo factors that play important roles in this disease. So it seems that adults of both sexes need between 1,000 and 1,200 mg of calcium daily to help prevent the disabling fractures that may result from osteoporosis.

The proposal marked a major advance in the process of international policy coordination that Baker launched three years ago in an attempt to lend more stability to the world economy.

The use of 'monitoring zones" would tell policymakers when economies were deviating significantly from appropriate paths, "suggesting the need for consultation and possible actions," Baker said in remarks prepared for delivery to the council on foreign relations in

He also proposed expanding the coordination process to cover not only exchange rates, interest rates and fiscal policies, but also urgent structural reforms in areas such as taxes, financial market liberalisation and the deregulation of labour markets. Baker was in Paris for the ministerial meeting of the Organisation of Econontie Cooperation and Development (OECD). which ended on Thursday.

The monitoring zones would huild on the series of performance indicators such as growth and inflation rates that the Group of Seven agreed to develop last year to assess progress toward medium-term economic goals. But instead of just tracking these indicators, Baker is suggesting that specific ranges be tar-

Baker said he was proposing even closer coordination of policies because countries had become convinced that the cooperation to date was bearing

"We have created a political mechanism that has brought discipline and structure to international economie policy making. Now I think we have mustered the necessary political will to give this process impetus and. meaning," he said. Policy

Baker said his aim was to "institutionalise" policy coordination so that it outlives its present proponents,

"Many of those who earlier had doubted this process have seen its benefits," he said. "As a result, coordination now has broader support and momentum that should carry it into the future, well beyond the terms of current administrations in the G-7 countries." In other words, according to a treasury official. Baker wants to "self-perpetuating impart momentum" to policy coordination so that countries are encouraged by the success of cooperation to keep huilding

Baker emphasised that he was advocating a step-by-step approach to improving the world monetary system and did not envisage an entirely new order.

"It is tempting, and in fact can be instructive, to consider sweeping, revolutionary changes in the system - particularly the exchange rate part of the system. But it is far from elear that such changes are desirable or prac-tical," he said.

He said the system now emerg-ing has the virtue of being flexible enough to allow policymakers to shift emphasis when circumstanFor instance, coordination in 1985 and 1986 stressed exchange rates. In 1987 and so far in 1988, the focus has been on changes in underlying policies.

"It is no mean feat that this shift was conducted without a major breakdown in the system." he said.

Bangemann to stand for top EEC job

BONN, May 20. (Reuter): West German Economics Minister Martin Bangemann has decided to seek the top European Economic Community joh, but he could face hostility to the move in Brussels while leaving behind him a trouble legacy in Bonn. Bangemann, 53, said in a television interview on Thursday that he would resign as economics minister and also as chairman of the Free Democratic Party (FDP), the junior partner in Chancellor Helmui Kohl's threeparty coalition.

Goal

He made it clear that, although his initial aim was to become one of the 17 members of the European Commission, his ultimate goal was the commission presidency.

"I see my candidacy as ... first being named by the government as one of the two West German commissioners," he said. "Then we will try in talks to push through the candidaey for president."

The present incumhent is Frenchman Jacques Delors, who has indicated that he would like to remain in his post when his four-year term runs out this year.

Bangemann's forthright announcement contrasted with the diplomatic niceties that usually usher in such international appointments and could cause some fur to rise in

Even commissioner Karl-Heinz Narjes, the man whom government sources expect Bangemann to succeed, did not seem particularly pleased at the idea of handing over his post to him.

"Elected memhers of the European Parliament should be considered first," Narjes told the Cologne Express newspaper. He said nationality was a secondary consideration in such appointments and no substitute for "proof of ability and trust." At home in Bonn, the first squalls have heralded the inevitable storm around Bangemann's economics post.

The FDP say they are determined to keep the key cabinet post, while the right-wing Chris-tian Social Union (CSU) of Franz Josef Strauss - their coalition partners - also want it.

Kohl's government has already been hadly shaken by similar squabhles between the parties, particularly over the foreign minister's job held by Hans-Dietrich Genscher.

Inequality

The CSU, complaining of the inequality of a party with only mne per cent of the vote holding four cabinet seats, has told the FDP that the economics portfolio is not an inheritance.

FDP party sources say, however, that they expect their general secretary, Helmut Haussman, to take over the ministry. The only candidate who has declared himself for the post of FDP chairman is Bangemann's predecessor as economics minister, Otto Lambsdorff, although the sources said they expected several more candidates to run in the September election.

Manila economy might be overheating: bank chief

MANILA, May 20, (Reuter): The Philippine economy is grow-ing strongly hut is in danger of overheating, Central Bank Governor Jose Fernandez said

"The growth is real," he told Reuters in an interview. "The reason I talk about overheating is when you have the manufacturing sector growing at between 30 and 40 per cent, that is unsustainable. If real-estate prices have gone up 500 per cent, it certainly is a red flag."

Growth

An overheating economy suf-fers rising inflation and imports and a drop in the value of the

The Philippines' real gross national product, the value of goods and services including government and private spending, grew hy 5.7 per cent in 1987 after 1.9 per cent growth in 1986. Economists have said last year's healthy growth was due to an explosion of consumer spending but warned that with man-ufacturers finding it difficult to meet demand, growth this year will depend on new investments.

Last week the Central Bank said the country's halance of payments swung into a $116 million surplus in the three months ending March, up from a $39 million deficit a year ago.

Exports

The country's main exports are coconut products, copper concentrates, sugar and timber. Its main imports are oil-based fuels, machinery, chemicals and electrical equipment.

Fernandez said he was not worried about the level of gross international reserves, the stock of foreign currency, gold and foreign investments, which totalled $1.8 hillion at the end of Fehruary, down from 2.4 hillion at the end of 1986.

Opec Fund meeting to review operations

VIENNA, May 20, (Opecna): Finance ministers of Opec member states who constitute the policy-making council of the Opec Fund for International Development will assemble here on June 14 for their annual meet-

The one-day meeting will review the fund's annual report for 1987, its operations during the current year and the status of the common fund for commodities.

The Opec Fund has paid the subscriptions of a number of the least developed countries to the common fund.

The council meets in June every year to examine the operations and activities of the fund set up by Opec countries in 1976 to channel assistance to developing countries. It last met in Caracas, Venezuela, under the chairmanship of Venezuelan Finance Minister Dr Hector Hurtado.

The June meeting will follow the holding of the 43rd session of the fund governing board under the chairmanship of Osama Faquih, who is also Saudi Arabian Deputy Minister of Finance and National Economy.

Loans

The board is expected to approve a new round of loans and grants to developing countries.

Only non-Opec developing countries are eligible for fund assistance, with the least developed and most serioulsy affected among them receiving priority.

International institutions whose activities benefit developing countries also receive grants from the fund.

Since its establishment, the fund has been assisting projects involving infrastructure, energy, agriculture, education, health and food security. The idea of creating a collective aid facility was to consolidate the assistance extended by Opec's 13 membreountries, in addition to assitance extended by them through other hilateral and multilateral means.

The Opec Fund extends three types of loans: Project loans which are provided for the implementation of specific development schemes. In addition, the fund extends lines of eredit to national development hanks to finance

Programme loans which have a broader coverage and are used to finance rehabilitation or improvement of the economic sector or sub-sector and assist recipient countries in ohtaining inputs, equipment and spare parts. Under this type of loan, both the fund and the recipient larger shares of fund assistance because it gives priority to countries with low per capita incomes.

New colour TV

BEIJING, May 20. (Kuna): A new kind of colour television that can display two frames simultaneously has been developed in Guangzhou, capital of South

China's Guangdong province.
This will enable viewers to watch two channels at the same ume, according to today's "People's Daily (overseas edition)."

US oil imports up

WASHINGTON, May 20, (Opecna): US oil imports in April rose dramatically to 7.03 million hpd from 5.77 million bpd in April 1987, an increase of 21 per cent, according to the American Petroleum Institute

Domestic oil production in April declined by 220,000 hpd to 8.17 million bpd compared with the same period last year, API said, pointing out that there had been no year-to-year increase in Alaskan production to help offset the output decline in the lower 48 states of the union.

Describing demand for petroleum products in April as 'flat" API reported that total US stocks -- crude oil and products - during the month were 2.1 per cent higher than in March and 1.5 per cent over April 1987

Opec official says 5pc cutback out of balance

MEXICO CITY, May 20, (AP): Opec's secretary-general spill on Wednesday that a proposal from independent oil-producing nations for a 5 per cent cut in their exports is out of halance, "L: percentage terms the adjustment of 5 per cent seems fair, but it means 180,000 barrels less for the independent producers and around 800,000 barrels less for the Opec members, so it would it: out of balance," Fhadil J. Chalabi said. He spoke at a seminar and 21st century technology organised by the Mexican Petroleum Institute. His comments were carried by the Mexican domestic news agencies Excelsion and Notimex. "The proposal will be analysed at the organisation's next meeting in June." Chelaist said. "A more concrete proposal is expected from the independen: producers to defend the difficult situation that the market currently faces." Mexico, the world's sixth-largest oil producer, is not :: member of the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries but recently held talks with the organisation about reducing output in an effort to bolster sagging world prices. Chalabi said the international oil market is in an "extremely weak" situation and greater cooperation between member and non-member nations of Opec is needed urgently. He said a recovery of oil price. can't be expected before 1990. "They are moving at about $18 per barrel, because of the overproduction of the market, which is inundated with petroleum." Other non-organisation producers involved in the recent meeting in Vienna, Austria, were Egypt, China, Malaysia, Oman and Angola.

Higher growth forecast for Sri Lankan economy

COLOMBO, May 20, (Reuter): Sri Lanka's economy is forecast to grow by 5.5 per cent in 1988, after a drought and Tanal. separatist violence ont growth last year to its lowest in a decade. senior central hank official said today, "So far, our main export crops - tea, rubber and coconut - are doing well and if the weather is on course we should end 1988 on a better note," said hank governor Warnasena Rasaputra. The economy grew by only 1.5 per cent in 1987 and 4.3 per cent in 1986. He said in an interview that higher yields from rice fields would compensate for production losses in the north and cast, where Tamil guervillas are fighting for a separate state. Rice production fell by 18 per cent. coconnt by 30 per cent and rubber by 13 per cent while ten output rose marginally. Rasaputra said that in the industrial sector mure loans were being made to small and medium firms, indicating that further growth was expected from this area. "Agriculture is doing well, industry is doing well and the services sector should also follow similar trends. It was on this basis that we have projected higher growth," he said. He sald tea and coconut were fetching good prices while rubber had peaked at record levels. Rasaputra said inflation rose to 10.5 per cent in 1987, compared to a projected six to eight per cent, inflation in 1988 is forecast at eight

GCC tries to set up petroleum coke industry

ABU DHABI, May 20. (Opecna): The Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) is currently conducting negotiations to see up a petroleum coke industry, according to a newspaper report. The daily "Khaleej Times" said that the venture would be established under the auspices of the Gulf Organisation for Industrial Investments (GOII). The report said that the organisation was likely to National Oil Company on the feasibility of utilising petroleum coke. The newspaper stressed that the governments of the six-member GCC, which includes Opec member countries Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Qatar and the United Arah Emirates, along with Bahrain and Oman, were expected to encourage the private sector to invest in the industry.

The report added that the UAE Ministry of Finance and Industry had drawn up an extensive programme for the development of the country's petroleum coke, the residue lest after petroleum deposits have been used.

Oman succeeds in narrowing budget deficit by 28pc

MUSCAT, May 20, (AP): The oil-producing state of Cman has narrowed its budget deficit for 1987 to 28 per cent below what had been forecast, according to figures released here yesterday.
The state-run Oman Development Bank, in its annual report.

gave the budget deficit figure for the outgoing year as 170 million rials ($440 million). The deficit had been projected at 248 million riyals ($640 million), with a difference of 78 million rials ($200) million). Oman, like other countries whose major rescauce are derived from oil exports, has been suffering from budget deficits since the early 1980s when world oil market prices weakened. Oman is not a member of the 13-nation oil organisation, the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries, but it has reduced its daily output to help Opec stabilise the oil market, it also commits itself to the Opec-decreed benchmark price. The worst hudget deficit suffered by the sultanate was in 1986 at 742 million rials ($1.915 hillion) and the figure for 1987 meant the government succeeded in narrowing the deficit by 77 per cent. Compared to other oil exporting nations who faced the collapse in oil prices two years ago, it is incredible," ODB manager Mohammed Othman told the Associated Press, Basic government steps to remedy the situation in wake of the simup include heavy cutbacks in government spending as well as reductions in number of foreign workers by more than 100,000, or a third of the

"The government acted fast in 1986 when gross domestic product dropped by 19 per cent and the economy underwent quite n jolt. There were stringent hudget cuts," Othman said in an interview. "The philosophy was simple: my revenue is this, therefore I can only spend this." Bank chairman Mohammed Yousef, in his annual report, said Oman had survived "the most difficult period."

Joint oil venture to be set up

ABU DHABI, May 20, [Reuter): Oil ministers from North and South Yemen will meet next week to discuss setting up a joint venture to exploit border oilfields, the South Yemeni minister was quoted on Wednesday as saying. Saleh Abubaker Bia Hussainoun told Al Ittihad newspaper, the company would be jointly owned and financed by the two governments. "But it can seek foreign oil expertise and enter contracts with Arah and foreign firms," he said. Hussainoun said the talks with North Yemen's Ahmed Ali Al Muhani would be extremely important. "The meeting is the first since the Sanaa summit and will give birth to the first joint development venture between the two countries," he was quoted as saying. North Yemeni President Ali Abdullah Saleh and South Verneni leader Ali Salem Al Baidh agreed at talks early this month to jointly exploit oil reserves. The summit was their second since they met in Taiz in mid-April and agreed tu reduce troop numbers along their border. In other remarks published on Wednesday, Hussainoun was quoted as saying that South Yemen had upgraded to 500 million tonnes the oil reserves inits Shahwa field. He told Kuwait's Al Seyassah newspaper tha: production was now limited to what 20 to 30 lorries could transport out of the region each day. The oil is being taken to Aden for refining. He said the Soviet Union had agreed to develop the field and build a pipeline at a cost of 70 million ropbles ($120

The Middle East Economic Survey said last month the pipeline would have an initial capacity of 50,000 to 70,000 harrels per day, eventually reaching 500,000 barrels.

CONCERH OVER POSSIBLE RENEWED WALL STREET WEAKNESS, IN THE FACE OF THE LATEST CONSUMER PRICE DATA, EVAPORATED AFTER THE DATA SHOWED AN EXPECTED 0.4 PCT RISE IN APRIL. THE NEW YORK MARKET OPENED HIGHER BUT SHOWED AN EASIER TENDENCY.

NEWS OF A SLIGHTLY LARGER THAN EXPECTED RISE IN BRITAIN'S APRIL RETAIL PRICE INDEX (RPI) HAD LITTLE IMPACT ON THE MARKET. THE APRIL FIGURE SHOWED A GAIN OF 1.6 PCT GIVING A YEAR-ON-YEAR INFLATION RATE OF 3.9 PCT AGAINST 3.5 PCT IN MARCH.

ALTHOUGH ABOVE EXPECTATIONS, A RISE IN EXCESS OF THE 0.4 PCT INCREASE SEEN IN MARCH WAS ANTICIPATED AS BUDGET EXCISE MEASURES WORKED THROUGH THE ECONOMY. ONE DEALER SAID, "THE FIGURE WAS ONLY JUST ABOVE THE (FORECAST) RANGE. WE WERE MORE CONCERNED ABOUT THE U.S. INFLATION DATA."

London Gold

LONDON, MAY 20, REUTER - GOLD BULLION DRIFTED LOWER FOLLOWING A SMALLER THAN EXPECTED RISE IN U.S. CONSUMER PRICES IN APRIL AND WAS FIXED AT 484.90 DLRS AN OUNCE THIS AFTERNOON, SELOW THURSDAY'S CLOSE OF 457.10/457.50 AND MORNING FIX OF

THE U.S. DATA HELPED TO DIMINISM SLIGHTLY FEARS OF RISING INFLATION UNION HAVE SEEN INVESTORS SWITCHING INTO PRECIOUS

METALS THIS WEEK. GOLD HAD OPENED LITTLE CHANGED AT 456.90/457.40 BUT EASED MARGINALLY BY THE MORNING FIX. THE EASIER TONE ON PLATINUM AFTER EARLT GAINS WERE WIPED OUT ALSO CONTRIBUTED TO GOLD'S FALL.

London Money Market

LONDON, MAY 20, REUTER - MONEY RATES ENDED MIXED, WITH MANY OPERATORS FEELING BASE RATES COULD BE FORCED LOWER BY RENEWED STERLING STRENGTH BUT FEW HAVING THE NERVE TO PUSH AGGRESSIVELY AHEAD OF THE LONG HOLIDAY WEEKEND IN EUROPE, DEALERS SAID.

MANY EUROPEAN CENTRES ARE CLOSED FOR THE WHIT HOLIDAY ON MONDAT AND THE RENEWED UPWARD PRESSURE ON STERLING WHICH MANY ANALYSTS ARE PREDICTING COULD THUS BE DELAYED WHILL TUESDAY. THE MONEY MARKET IS LOATH TO TEST RATE LEVELS. IT IS AWARE THAT THE HEAR TERM TREND IN BASE RATES WILL BE FIXED EXCLUSIVELY BY THE FOREIGN EXCHANGES AND ESPECIALLY BY THE STERLING/MARK RATE, WHICH HAS HELD UP DESPITE THE BASE RATE CUT ON MAY 17.

Wall Street Market Report

New York, May 20, Reuter — Wall Street stocks were marginally higher at midday, as Blue Chips recovared from a tate morning stall to stand slightly firmer. But traders said the session was very dull with no fresh news emerging to bring investors off the sidelines.

News that consumer pricas rose 0.4 pct in April was only mildly encouraging, since the figure was in line with estimates, they said. The consumer price index rose 0.5 pct in March. Tha Dow rose two to 1961, after hitting a low of 1952. Gainers led decliners five to four in lacklustre volume.

India's trade deficit narrows

NEW DELHI, May 20 (AP): India's trade deficit narrowed for the second consecutive year to $5.11 hillion in fiscal as exports rose to a record level. Finance Minister N.D. Tiwarisaid today. Tiwari told a news conference India's goal of improving its export performance would continue. "There is no room for complacency, and we have to aim for greater strides" in exports, he

He added that the country would maintain its policy of trying to limit imports to essential commodities, such as edible oil. and goods needed to help Indian industry manufacture products for export.

We would like our imports to go down," he said. "But if we have to import — for example, for value-added exports — we have to allow for more imports." The figures released by Tiwari show that the deficit for fiscal 1987-88, which ended March 31, was down 15 per cent from the $5.88 billion in red ink for fiscal 1986-87. India registered a record deficil of $6.35 billion in fiscal 1985-86.

Exports in fiseal 1987-88 totalled a record $12.12 hillion, surpassing the previous high of $9.82 hillion a year earlier. Imports were $17.23 hillion, compared with $15.70 hillion a year earlier.

Tiwari said the preliminary export goal for the current fiscal year was about $13 billion hut further consultations with trade and commerce officials were needed before a final target was Tiwari said the strongest growth in exports in fiscal 1987-88 occurred in garments, cotton fahrics, leather and leather goods, gems and jewellery, engineering goods, chemicals, rice and tea, carpets and handictafts.

US offers GATT a plan

GENEVA, May 18, (Reuter): The United States has presented a plan to the 105-nation GATT negotiations proposing a three-phase liberalisation of trade in services, delegales said loday. The proposal, ohtained by Reuters, was formally submitted on Tuesday at the first closed session of a four-day meeting of the services group under the Uruguay round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

The new five-page US services plan said: "An effective framstantive obligations ..

"This means that while the primary emphasis of the framework agreement is to establish a solid, rule-based foundation providing for the progressive liberabsation for international trade in services, it should also set. forth procedures for the subsequent removal of obstacles found not to be consistent with the principles of the framework."

The US plan proposed a threestep process, and defined the phases as 'general rules drafting and the 'further liberalisation

ing on a definition of services generally taken to include banking, insurance and other finaneial services, telecommunications, computer services, consulting and tourism.

Taking insurance as an exam-ple, the US paper suggested it would be commonly understood 10 include the underwriting of property/casualty, life insurance and reinsurance.

to liberalise services

Ministers who launehed the round in September 1986 at the resort of Punte Del Este agreed to a US demand to include services in this GATT round - despite resistance from developing nations anxious to protect their infant industries.

The US plan called for establishing an agreed framework for regulating service industries by the end of 1990, when the fouryear negotiations are set to conelude, It expanded on an earlier US blueprint, presented last November 3.

ework agreement must contain both procedural as well as sub-

Delegates are far from agree-

"However, il would be necesinsurance brokerage, claims adjustment and risk management are covered," the plan added.

The US paper would allow countries, in phase two, to signal sectors that would not be brought into conformity with the framework agreement upon the accordentering mIo force.

"In very limited instances, interested parties may wish to establish a separate sectoral agreement with rules that are legally apart from the provisions of the framework agreement."

Brokerage firms prepare for new wave of layoffs

NEW YORK, May 20, (Reuter): As share trading volume continues to dwindle and investor confidence wanes, Wall Street brokers are bracing themselves for the expected layoff of thousands more securities industry work-

Brokerage analysts said that, if marker conditions do not improve dramatically, US firms will have to cut more than 20,000 jobs worldwide,

Already more than 22,000 jobs have been lost in the US financial services industry since the October market 19 crash. "II's not going to happen tomorrow. It's going to be a paring process over time," said analyst Larry Eckenfelder with Prudential-Bache Securities. The thin volume and quiet telephones are aggravating brokers' fears of a fresh wave of layoffs. "It's inevitable," said one trader at 8 major firm. "You walk around the building and a lot of people are sitting around doing nothing."

Some Wall Street professionals are less pessimistic about the future, believing the cuts made up to now are probably suf-But others said the first round of cuts, which began before the October crash, were not deep enough to reduce the brokerage firms' high staff costs.

World gold production hits record levels: dealer

LONDON, May 20, (Reuter): Non-communist mine production of gold last year maintained its rapid growth rate, rising four per cent to a record 1,341 tonnes, London-based dealers Samuel Montagu and Co Ltd said on Wednesday.

In their annual bullion review, Samuel Montagu said the rise from the 1986 level of 1,290 tonnes was due to increases in North America and Australia. South African production fell due to the mining of lower grade ore and strikes.

South African output fell to 605 tonnes from 638 in 1986 and is now 45 per cent of non-communist world production compared with 60 per cent in 1984. Output

US, Canadian and Australian output all exceeded 100 tonnes last year, where the accelerated pace of both development and production was sustained, Montagu said.

Latin American production also continued to rise, and was estimated at 184 tonnes, up from 175 tonnes in 1986. Brazil was the region's largest producer, with output at 75 tonnes. Sales of gold by the Soviet Union, possibly to finance substantial grain purchases, were around 280 tonnes, similar to 1986. Other communist countries were nel sellers, and total communist sales are estimated at 305 tonnes.

The eurrency eased to 1.7025 marks from Tuesday's close of 1.7060, and fell to 125.05 yen from 125.70.

In Tokyo, the Nikkei index

lost 52.40 points, or 0.19 per cent, to 27,767.58. It rose 60.11 points on Tuesday. Rises almost mal-ched falls in heavy volume of 1.2 billion shares

The US trade improvement reflected higher exports and a much stronger economy than the stock market had figured on, leading to inflation worries and fears that corporate earnings may soon peak. The bond market fell sharply, adjusting to the possibility of higher inflation in an overheated economy. We're getting the same psy-ehology as last September," said Waehlel. "Interest rates on bonds are widening their spreads (premiums) over stocks dividends). And money's shiftig oul of stocks." The period immediately prior to the stock market crash last October saw interest rates jumping to the year's highs and economic forecasts showing husiness activity racing ahead.

Traders were confused over whal might happen next, par-ticularly about what the Federal Reserve, the US central bank, might do. Moves Rumours that it might follow up on last week's credit tighten-mg moves with a rise in the discount rate unnerved stock market traders. Some said an increase might be needed to restore confidence in the markets and choke off inflation.

"People have no confidence in their ability of (choosing) what move to make next," said Peter Rogers of Bank Leu Ltd. "As a result, they're doing nothing."

Brazil debt negotiators take a breather, say bankers

NEW YORK, May 20, (AP): Talks between Brazil and its leading bank lenders have been hriefly halted to allow both parues to resolve some obstructions to a long-term rescheduling and new money package, bankers said on Wednesday.

"Brazil's negotiators said they needed to return home for con-sultations and the committee is going over a few pending points. We still think we're close to a deal, but we have to resolve a few remaining problems," one banker said.

Meanwhile, in Sao Paulo on Wednesday a senior World Bank official said the bank would increase lending to Brazil if the country sustained a coherent economic programme in which the private sector played a new

Exxon announces earnings upswing

ST. LOUIS, Missouri, May 20. (AP): Exxon Corp., the largest US oil company, entered this year on B "definite earnings upswing" despile two years of severe oil price volatility and market disruptions, chairman Lawrence G. Rawl said on Thursday at the company's annual meeting.

Exxon's net income of $1.46 billion for the first quarter of 1988 was up 36 per cent over the first quarter of 1987, even though sverage crude oil prices in Ihis year's first quarter were about $2 a barrel lower than the first quarter last year, Rawl said. "The effect of these declining oil prices on our exploration and production carnings was cusbioned somewhat by increased production from new and existing fields," Rawl said of the New York-based corpora-tion. 'More importantly, bowever, petroleum product prices - both here and abroad -were relatively firm."

Platinum approached 6-1/2month highs on $564 an ounce in Europe vesterday before falling back to close at $560. It opened again at $560 today.

Gold bullion touched fourweek highs around $460 an ounce during trading yesterday while silver advanced to 675 cents an ounce, its best for six weeks. Silver opened in Europe about eight cents lower today.

There has been concern in the platinum market that South Africa may curb shipments to the United States if Congress adopted tougher economic sanerions over Pretoria's apartheid policies. But South Africa Foreign Minister Pik Botha said his country would not withhold strategic metals from the West.

Strong jewellery demand from Japan has also eaten away at platinum stocks and more of the metal is being used in the West in catalytic converters to control car exhaust emissions.

Platinum demand last year exceeded supply by 220,000 ounces, London-based broker Johnson Matthey PLC said in its annual industry review published earlier this week. Deficits were likely again, possibly for the rest of this decade, it added.

US consumer prices rise 0.4pc

WASHINGTON. May 20, (AP): US consumer prices rose 0.4 per cent in April, with clothing costs increasing for the second straight month and grocery prices climbing at their fastest pace in 20 months, the government reported today. Energy prices were up sharply as well, reflecting the steepest rise in gasoline prices since August.

The gain, only marginally bet-ter than March's 0.5 per cent gain, meant that for the first four months this year retail prices were up at an annual rate of 4.5 per cent.

While this was little changed from the 4,4 per cent for all of 1987, economists were concerned because much of the inflationary pressure has shown up in the last two months. Analysts noted that the March rise had been the most severe since January 1987.

More than one-fourth of the

April gain came came from a steep 2.0 per cent jump in clothing costs, tying March for the greatest one-month gain since price records were first kept in Gasoline prices climbed 1.1 per cent last month after a 0.4 per cent March rise. Last month's jump was the steepest since a 3.3 per cent rise in August. After that, gasoline prices had fallen for six straight months.

The gasoline price increases

over the last two months largely reflected concern that the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries would agree with nonmember nations to limit produc-

But those talks ended in failure and world oil prices have since fallen substantially, leading analysts to believe that retail prices will soon turn downward. The Labour Department gave these other specifics on April retail price activity:

- The record gain in clothing costs reflected an average 3.5 per cent gain in the prices of women's apparel, a 2.7 per cent rise in the prices for children's goods and a 2.1 per cent jump in men's clothing costs.

- New car prices were unchanged while automobile financing costs fell by 1.1 per cent. Public transportation expenses, reflecting a jump in airline fares, rose 0.8 per cent. - Home heating oil prices rose 0.9 per cent, while natural gas and electricity costs rose 0.4 per

Last month's 0.4 per cent overall gain was equivalent to an annual inflation rate of 5.3 per

The April increase left the overall index at 117.1, meaning that a hypothetical selection of goods costing $100 during a cost $117.10 last month. Fears of inflation have stirred Stocks barely broke a two-day losing streak yesterday after worries about inflation and rising interest rates pushed the Dow Jones Industrial Average down sharply Tuesday and Wednesday.

Investors have viewed with some alarm a string of seemingly good economic reports in recent weeks. Unemployment in April fell to a 14-year-low of 5.4 per cent, while the factory operating rate climbed to an eight-year high of 82.7 per cent.

While evidence of better-thanexpected economic activity, the reports also raised fears in financial markets that the US economy is growing too strongly and soon tight labour markets and high factory operating rates will translate into higher wages and rising prices.

Forecast

President Ronald Reagan's administration maintained that the concerns about the inflation bave been overblown. Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III told reporters yesterday that the administration saw no reason to change its forecast that consumer prices would rise by 4.3 per

Private economists are in general agreement with the administration's forecast, contending tbat the inflation worries exhibited by the market would subside once the impact of a spike in oil prices abates. Michael Evans, head of a

Washington forecasting firm, said be does not look for inflation to get above 4.5 per cent this year because of the actions already taken by the Federal Reserve, the US central bank. Twice in the past two months, the Fed has tightened up on

Diamonds are forever

By Midas

THAT simple slogan is probably one of the best pieces of advertising copy ever written and has been responsible for making diamonds the best-known and most coveted precious stones on earth. Of course, the song 'Diamonds are a girl's best friend' didn't actually harm the market much either. But are diamonds really a good invest-

The simple answer is no, not if you are looking for a quick profit. The problem is that the diamond market is completely controlled by a single company. De Beers of South Africa who handle roughly 80 per cent of all the world's rough diamonds.

By strictly limiting the quanuty of new diamonds coming into the marker. De Beers ean set a world price exactly as they

tf any other producers, such as the Australians or those from Zaire, try to undercut He Beers prices, the 'Syndicate' can simply dump diamonds onto the market and force the price down so sharply that the outsiders will be ban-

Dealers

The Syndicate was the name given to an influential group of around 140 De Beers' approved diamond dealers, producers and gemsmiths back in the 1930's. Nowadays, its proper title is the Central Selling Organisation, CSO, but the Syndicate gives the CSO the correct flavour of a ruthless organisation dedicated to a single purpose, the absolute control of the entire world diamond market.

The way the Syndicate works is very simple. Since it owns the largest, in effect the only, stockpile of uncut stones in the world. the Syndicate releases new stones in strictly limited quantities.

sights. the favoured dealers are each allocated a small box filled with a mixture of stones, some small, some large, at a set price. There is no bargaining and no choice of what sort of stones they gel. They simply have to take what is offered, all or nothing. They can refuse their allocation, but it's a dangerous thing to do since they might never be invited to another sight, and thus lose their membership of the Syndicate. Considering that most of the stones at the sight will be sold at a profit of at least 100 per cent.

Attempts

that is not a risk anyone wants to

There have been several attempts to break the power of De Beers' cartel. The most recent was during the late Seventics when the Israelis tried to build up their own stockpile of stones. Prices rocketed to around $30,000 per carat and for a while it seemed that the Israelis might actually succeed in wresting control away from De Beers and the Central Selling Office.

But the CSO acted with its usual ruthless efficiency by simply expelling any member who had sold stones to the Israelis. Thus deprived of their supply. these diamond dealers all went out of business, which was a very effective warning to others who might have been tempted to add to the Israeli stockpile.

Charges

The price of diamonds collapsed to $7,000 per cara: and the CSO bad proven again that it's power was supreme in the world diamond market

Although such dramatic price changes might seem to offer scope for speculators to make a handsome profit in diamonds it is not easy to do so. The first difficulty is the valuation of the stones themselves, which is ultimately a matter of industing taste and may fluctuate considerably even among skitted professionals. There is a classification statem which gives a semi-scientific guide to prices, but it is by En means exact. The scale goes from 'D' down to 'M', with a one care!

flawless 'M' being the legal expensive. The other problem is how in sell your stones. If the price goes up 20 per cent, no dealer is likely to offer you 20 per cent more than you paid for your stone why not? Well, remember he's getting a 100% mark up on the stones he buys at his sights The true value of diamonds is that they are easily transportable stores of value. Land is immore. ble, and gold is too heavy, but diamonds can be slipped into your back pocket, and taken wherever you please. In times of war, or civil unrest, they can be very useful indeed as a way of exporting one's wealth

Conscious One of the biggest growth areas in the current world diamond market is Japan A few years ago, the Japanese had no special interest in the stones, but clever marketing, those tamous slogans again, has made the Japanese very conscious of the mystique and magic of these brilliant pieces of carbon Nowadays, Japanese ladies are as interested in diamond rings as their sisters everywhere else in the world, and the market for diamonds in Japan is booming. So if you are looking for a quick profit, forget about diamonds. If you want to be able to take your capital with you through wars and revolutions diamonds might be very handy. but for most people the real purpose of owning a diamond is sentimental. How else to fell your favourite lady how you feel

Healthy steel production spurs growth in related industries

CLEVELAND, May 20, (UPI): Monthly production in the domestic steel industry has reached its highest level since May 1984, triggering surges in related businesses such as Great Lakes Shipping. The Oglebay Norton Co., for example, reported that 10 of its 13 self-unloading vessels were in use at the beginning of the shipping season, compared with just seven in April 1987. And the Lake Carriers' Association in Cleveland said 61 vessels will be in service on the Great Lakes by the end of May, compared with 50 one year ago and a high of 59 for 1987. US production reached 8.76 March, up from 7.94 million tons in February and 8.3 million tons in January, according to statistics from the American Iron and Steel Institute in Washington. Production reached 9 million tons for a lew months in 1984. but prior to that the industry suffered a downturn dating back months of 1981. Significant Lake Carriers' executives attributed a significant part of its increased activity to stone cargo for the construction industry, but Great Lakes Shipping is dependent mostly on iron ore

to the 10-million-ton production shipments for the steel industry.

"Last year in September we brought out two big (idled) yessels to move iron ore." Lake Carriers' spokesman Glen Nek-vasil said. "You can bonestly say that there is only one vessel left (out of operation) that could work the iron ore trade.'

Jack Yewell, a spokesman for Oglebay Norton in Cleveland. also said his company began to benefit from a renewed demand in materials for the steel industry late in 1987.

We really noticed a pickup in the fourth quarter of last year, which forced us to sail the fleet longer and operate our iron ore pelletising plants in Minnesota right through the end of the year," Yewell said.

Capacity The domestic steel industry operated at 90.1 per cent of capacity in the first quarter of 1987 and reached 95.5 per cent the week ending April 30, the Steel Institute said. But while percentage of capacity was up, production sig-nificantly trails that of 1979 when capacity was 155 million toris of raw steel. Today's capacity is just 112 million tons, said Sheldon Wesson, spokesman for the Steel institute. Things have been very difficult for the past five or six years. The industry lost money (12 billion) consistently from 1982 to 1986; so things were pretty grim," Wesson said. "Although they (the current statistics) are not by any means to be compared with the 1979 b. om or the 1973 boom, considering the reduced size of the industry, things are more constructive looking.

USX Corp., the nation's lar-gest sleelmaker, bas cut its capacity from 31 million tons in 1983 to 19 million tons currently, and is now operating near capacity.

The market is pretty good. The demand is strong," said Ernie Glenn, a USX spokesman in Pittsburgh. "We bave no plans to take anymore capacity out but, as the years go on, nobody can really say."
Some 89.2 million tons of raw steel were produced domestically in 1987, and predictions call for more than 90 million tons this year, Wesson said. In 1979, 137 million tons were produced.

"The principal factor in the whole equation is the tremendous effort the whole industry has made to decrease production costs. The overall costs have come down by a third in less than 10 years - - lower labour costs. lower energy costs and lower material costs," Wesson said.

A decline in foreign competition for the US market has also helped the domestic producers. "Imports have come down somewhat in the last couple of years." Wesson said. "They reached an all-time high of '6' million tons in 1984. Last year. they were down to 20 million tons and it looks like there will be little change this year." Surge The surge in steel business. however, has not translated to an equal jump in employment levels, a spokesman for the United Steelworkers Union in Pittsburgh said. He said increased efficiency has limited the number of workers being called back to their jobs, although exact figures were not available.

The Great Lakes Shipping industry, meanwhile, is depending on a strong year by the nation's steelmakers. 'Wc

"We expect good improvement this year as a result of the steel industry." Oglehay Norton's, Yewell, said.

Last year was the best season for iron ore trade on the Great Lakes since 1984 and the second best year since 1981. Iron ore shipments were up 19 per cent to 61 million tons in 1987

US foreign investment on the rise

NEW YORK, May 20, (Reuter): Despite the weaker dollar, overseas investment by US companies is increasing at a record pace in a trend that runs counter to wbat many economists bad expected, the New York Times said today. The increase is due to a variety of factors, including a fear that the dollar's decline will be temporary, a desire for access to foreign technology and the need to be near customers to avoid trade barriers, the newspaper "We see no evidence of invest-ment coming back," Betty Barker, chief of the US Commerce Department Office that gathers data on overseas investment, was quoted as saying. Most of the investment has occurred in Europe, where most

US plants are located.

A weak dollar reduces the cost of manufacturing in the United States compared to other countries. In theory, that should prompt US firms to scale back expansion of foreign operations.

Operations

But American companies spent $22.6 million more abroad last year on their foreign operations than they brought back for use in this country — nearly twice the figure for 1986 — the Times

Most of that figure, which has been adjusted for fluctuations in the dollar against other currencies, is money earned and reinvested overseas.

But the Times said it included

$4 billion in net new capital or loans from parent companies.

The trend is likely to continue unless the dollar, down 39 per cent against other major currencies since 1985, falls further, according to economists and executives.

Scores of US companies are expanding their operations abroad, the Times said. Apple Computer Inc was cited for upgrading factories in Ireland and Singapore that manufacture personal com-puters and Cummins Engine Co for reinvesting in three British truck plants. Digital Equipment Corp was named for putting a new semiconductor plant in Scotland.

American firms intend to continue their heavy reliance on overseas affiliates to produce the goods they sell abroad as well. a trend which over the long run will limit export growth from the United States that will make the trade deficit harder to eliminate.

Reliance

Hungary to get $365m from IMF

WASHINGTON, May 20, (AP): A new loan of $365 million to the communist government of Hungary announced yesterday will raise its debt to the International Monetary Fund to over $1 billion.

It already owes the equivalent of 686 million. The fund is owned by 151 governments, with the biggest contribution from the United States. China and some other communist governments are members, but not the Soviet

Party leader Janes Kadar's government has promised a series of changes, including a reduction in the excess of imports from the Western world over Hungarian exports. It has also undertaken to reduce the government's budget deficit substantially by cutting subsidies to consumers and to governmentowned enterprises that are mak-

Raised

Credit is to be slowed and interest rates raised above the rate of inflation expected over the next 12 to 18 months. That give Hungarian depositors a real return on their moriey, instead of having to pay for the privilege of depositing it.

S. Korean pair blasts Chinese

NIIGATA, Japan, May 20. (Reuter): China lost its second title in the Asian Table Tennis Championsbips today, with China's top male and female players being easily defeated in the mixed doubles by a South Korean pair 21-10 21-13.

Men's world champion Jiang liahang, who lost to a North Korean on Wednesday, played well below his top form once again. "The South Koreans laved well," he said afterwards It was an important and surprisingly fast victory for South Korea's Yoo Nam-Kyu and Hyun Jung-Hwa — they linished off Jiaog and his partner Jiao Zhimin in only 25 minutes.

It was South Korea's second title in the tournament, which began io this oorthern Japanese port city on Sunday. South Korea also took the women's team gold on Wednesday, breaking China's domination of the Asian Table Tennis Champion-

China won all seven titles at the last championships in 1986 and also at the one before in

But play today was completely overshadowed by North Korea's sudden withdrawal from the tournament in protest against what it called an unreasonable ban by the Japanese goverment on North Korean players attendiog a reception organised by pro-Pyongyang groups.

Expected

North Korea won the silver medalio the men's and women's team events and their players were expected to do well in the individual matches which began foday.

Their departure leaves the lournament as a two-day contest between China and up-and-coming challengers South Korea, eager lo prove themselves ahead of the Seoul Olympics in Septem-

Asked about the departure of the North Koreans, South Korea's female star Hyun Jung-Hwa told reporters: "lonly think about the sports aspect. It is very regretable. I want this to be a good tournament,"

The individual singles' preliminary round got under way today as well but most of the top Chinese and South Korean players will not play until the second round tomorrow.

Indian seeks bodybuilding title at 75

CALCUTTA, May 20, | Reuter): Former Mr Universe Manohar Aich has come out of retirement at the age of 75 to bid for the Indian bantamweight bodybuilding

The 1.47 metre (4 foot 10 inches). Aich said he feared the bodybuilders association would bar him on grounds of age from representing West Bengal at the national championships in the western town of Ahmedabad today.

"So I asked them and they agreed. That is when I started training seriously. I am still very strong and muscular," the former circus strongman told reporters as he headed for the contest

Aich said he quit competitive bodybuilding in 1960 after winning a bronze medal in the Mr Universe contest, the title he won in 1952.

All eyes were on Sebastian Losado, Espanol's two-goal hero from the first leg. As he smashed the fifth attempt high into the home terraces, the dream had come true.

The Leverkusen players rushed to hug coach Erieb Ribbeck, who said all along that he was going to celebrate his last big night with the club by achieving the impossible.

The stunned Espanol squad, always in the shadow of their famous neighbours Barcelona, huried their heads, rueing the several chances they missed to grab a crucial away goal.

Adams has point to prove against Scots

LONDON, May 20, (Reuter): Arsenal centre hack Tony Adams will be anxious to justify England manager Bohby Robson's faith in him with a commanding display against Scotland in the Rous Cup at Wembley tomorrow.

"I have never been kissed so often in my life," a cool Ribbeck Adams, at 21 the youngest captain in the English First Divsaid with a bottle of champagne in his hand. #### Criticised

But a broken leg has put Butcher out of the tournament and Adams, who had an outstanding debut against Spain 15 months ago, has been widely criticised for his most recent international performance. He had a particularly unhappy evening on Monday Irying to cope with the wide-ranging skills of Kenny Dalglish and lan Rush when he played for an England XI in a testimonial for Liverpool skipper Alan Hansen.

While making the point this week that in the European championship his defeoce would have to handle "star material like Rush and Dalglish not ordinary club players," the England manager was also at pains to back young Adams.

N. Ireland open Cup campaign

BELFAST, May 20, (Reuter): Northern Ireland manager Billy Bingham is hrushing aside a dismal record of one win in two years and injury fears over star midfielder Norman Whiteside as he confidently prepares to open the team's World Cup campaign

'I'm more optimistic now than I have been for 18 months that there is the possibility we might surprise a few people again," said Bingham as his side warmed up to face Malta in Belfast in the first of the European qualifying group matches for the 1990 finals in Italy.

Bingham believes his new team can emulate the Northern lrish sides which reached the World Cup finals in Spain in 1982 and in Mexico in 1986.

"This competition is a great motivation for us. Everyone wants to play on a world stage, whether it's the guy in the local music hall or a team from the lower reaches." he said. "For footballers, the World Cup is our

New York beat San Diego

LONDON, May 20, (Reuter): New Zealand's Martin Crowehit a superb 132 on a difficult pitch for Somerset yesterday and upstaged Zimbabwe-born Graeme Hick, who completed a rare douhle failure for opponents Worcestershire.

Crowe's first century of the English cricket season ended his spell of poor form and helped to give Somerset the chance of an unexpected championship vic-tory against leaders Worcester-

The New Zealand vice-captain lifted his adopted county to 327 —a first innings lead of 87 — and Worcestershire were reduced to 52 for three by the close of the second day of the three-day match at Worcester.

Hammered

Hick was among the three secood innings dismissals, much to the relief of a Somerset side whom he hammered for 405 not out when the same teams met two weeks ago. He made eight and II in the current match, having piled up a total of $15 runs in bis previous six first-class innings and set up the prospect of achieving the rate feat of scoring 1,000 runs before the end of May. Crowe stole the spotlight on this occasion, having looked out of touch at the start but showing such resilience that he ultimately hit 18 fours and a six in an innings lasting 216 deliveries.

BIRMINGHAM. May 20, (Reuter): England captain Mike Gatting played the part to perfection yesterday when he hit an unbeaten 82 to guide his side to a six wickets victory over West Indies in the first one-day cricket international.

Gatting finished the match with a cover driven four 10 give England victory with two of their 55 overs to spare. England scored 219 for four in reply to West Indies' 217 all out off 55 overs.

Excellent

Gatting was ably abetted by his opening pair of Graham Gooch (43) and Chris Broad (35), while Derek Pringle confounded his critics by following an excellent spell of bowling with an unbeaten 23.

Pringle, whose selection was widely criticised, gave a splendid exhibition of seam bowling, with one for 26 from his 11 overs, which included five maidens.

He proved an admirable foil for pace bowler Gladstone Small, who bowled with relentless accuracy to capture four for 31 from his 11 overs, including the prize scalps of Gordon Greenidge (18) and skipper Viv Richards (13).
